

Jamie Harris came to Salt Spring from Ontario in 1990 as a young man and fell in love with the Coastal and Gulf Island Culture.

He was highly influenced by the rich history of the early settlers along with first nations from their love of farming, commercial fishing, sustainable logging and lumber milling.

He worked in construction when first arriving on the Island, then commercial fishing for a few years in the 1990's.

From selling firewood to the community for many years as well as being a ticketed tree faller and forester with many talents, Jamie is well known throughout the community as being a hard-working fellow.

With son's and family of his own he cares deeply about the direction and future of the Gulf Islands and its inhabitants.
